

FIVE GIRLS LOSE LIVES IN ROCKFORD FIRE

13 TRAPPED IN SECOND STORY; NINE INJURED

Explosion of Celluloid on First Floor Caused Blaze

ROCKFORD, Ill., May 28. (AP)—Five girl employees of the Sutton Top Shop, dealers in automobile accessories and makers of the celluloid vizor cap specialty, were burned to death and at least nine persons were seriously burned in a fire which swept the building occupied by the firm shortly before 5 o'clock tonight.

An explosion of celluloid on the first floor of the building trapped at least thirteen girls making caps on the second story of the structure and of these five failed to escape. The survivors all were burned and some were injured jumping from the windows of the second floor of the building.

The known dead: Helen Mamala, Mary Walleck, David Bartlett, identified; Alice Naretta, Mildred Cramer, one unidentified girl.

Violet Moffitt is missing, but it has been impossible to identify the fifth body as hers.

The injured are: Mrs. William Sutton, right arm and back burned.

Mrs. Walter Jodges, burned head and sprained back.

Mrs. Jessie Schumacher, arms, back and legs burned.

Catherine Wood, eyes and right arm burned, may go blind.

Martha Hendrick, legs and back burned.

Violet J. arms burned, sprained ankle.

Lucille Steffen, injured back and burn to arms, legs and back.

John Sutton, proprietor of the firm, seriously burned about head and arms. Feared that he inhaled flames.

Mrs. Lulu Finkbeiner, forehead, burned about head and arms.

Was to be Abandoned.

The building, an old structure, across the street from the court house was to be abandoned in a few days to make room for a new structure. The place was crowded with machinery installed for the purpose of turning out "celluloid caps" and the girls were working in a small room to the rear of the building. Downstairs a workman was cutting celluloid on a band saw, it was there it exploded with a roar that could be heard from several blocks. From just around the corner three companies of the fire department were on the scene in but a few seconds but the lower floor of the building was a mass of flames and dense choking fumes from the burning celluloid were pouring from every door and window.

Downtown crowds, on the way home for the supper hour gathered gleefully to witness the destruction of an old building already marked for demolition.

Suddenly from the smoke staggered the form of a man, his hair was gone, flesh hung in ugly ribbons from burns on his face. It was Sutton, proprietor of the place. He rushed toward Chief Thomas Blake.

"There's a dozen girls up there on the second floor," he choked. Immediately the whisper ran through the crowd. Firemen moved rapidly toward the rear of the building where the work room was located and the full power of each arriving fire company was concentrated on that portion of the building.

Two Jumped to Death.

Two girls were found lying in the alley where they had jumped. A foreman found another just inside the door. Soon grim grimaces forced their way thru the now silent and aghast crowd, bearing stretchers toward Rockford hospital half a block away.

Girl Lies Dead On Eve Of Wedding Day

MUSKEGON, Minn., May 28. (AP)—Tonight, on the eve of what was to have been her wedding day, Janet Krubach, 19 years old, lies dead in the morgue. Nearby are the bodies of her father, August Krubach, 48, and the young Chicagoan who was to have become her husband, William Frank. All were victims of a bomb received thru the mail at the resort hotel operated by Krubach and in which an elaborate wedding supper was to have been served tomorrow night.

Not far away, in the county jail, Asa K. Bartlett, 28 year old constable of Blue Lake township which Krubach served as supervisor, is held. Prosecutor R. Glenn Dunn, said a formal charge of sending a bomb thru the mails will be placed against Bartlett.

The prosecutor said Bartlett had made "some admissions" but Bartlett himself had nothing to say to newspapermen and displayed no emotion when at the request of Sheriff Lyman Covell, he viewed the bodies of the three bomb victims.

A coroner's jury has been named to sift the crime. A federal grand jury also has been asked.

BOYS ATTEMPT GETAWAY WITH RICH TREASURE

House Deserted By Spinster Sisters Held Fortune

NEW YORK, May 28. (AP)—The story of how three boys had been arrested as they were preparing to carry away a treasure of $200,000 from an abandoned house was today told in Yorkville court.

In the house where the treasure was found was that of the aged spinster sisters, Beatrice and Helen Herwig. Ten years ago they left it to take up residence in a hotel. With its furniture gathered dust the old mansion stood empty and tales of mystery were told about it.

Wednesday night a passerby noticed a light in an upstairs window. Police were notified. They searched the house. In a closet they found hidden a very scared boy. A shot was fired. Two other boys were told about it.

The police found a hoard of gold, silver and jewelry valued at $200,000. In one of a dozen trunks that had been broken open they found $20,000 in currency and gold. On the boys they found $26 in small change.

The boys, George Baglier, Rocco Giammarino and Matthew Mazello, were held without bail for examination June 3.

Police testified they found the front door of the mansion had been "jimmied."

Magistrate Duras before whom the boys were arraigned, was informed by Michael J. Moran, caretaker of the mansion, that it was not likely the sisters would appear again the boys as they had never left their apartment in the Park Avenue hotel since taking up residence there ten years ago. Moran could not assign reasons for their quitting the house.

HORSES POISONED AS PRELIMINARY TO BIG COUP TO COME LATER

Gangsters Wanted Victim To Win Once—Then Fleece Him Later

AURORA, Ill., May 28. (AP)—A confidence game to victimize an individual, rather than an extensive plot to effect a gambling coup, tonight was blamed by officials for the confessed poisoning of four thoroughbreds at Exposition Park which resulted in the cancellation of the feature race yesterday and the subsequent death of two of the horses.

Chief of Police Michael J. Moran, and Clifford R. Trimble, kennel manager of Exposition Park, said they believed U. G. Young, business man of Charleston, W. Va., who is one of four men under arrest in connection with the poisoning, was the intended victim and had been lured to Aurora by according information given to the authorities, the plan was to "dope" the four horses so another entry in the race, Faenza, would win. They understood Young was to have bet on Faenza, his winnings on the race being calculated to induce further gambling, when he would have been doped.

Young was reported to have said that he met Earle Clark of Columbus, Ohio, at Dayton, Ohio, and was told of a chance to make some money at Aurora and indeed him to come here with Charles Davis, candy manufacturer at Dayton. He had planned, it was said, to wager $1,000 on Faenza.

Young and Davis were arrested last night following confessions of the poison plot by Frank Marlow of Utica, N. Y., and E. Leaver of Toronto, Canada. Earle Clark, also named in the admissions, is sought as the "brains" of the scheme.

NORTH PLATTE VALLEY WATER FIGHT SERIOUS

Farmers Who Burnt Officials in Effigy May Revolt

SCOTT'S BLUFF, Neb., May 28. (AP)—With no immediate prospect of relief in sight and with their crops in dire need of moisture, the North Platte Valley water fight assumed an ominous aspect tonight. Some leaders in the fight, also hopeful of time agreement, fear the more radical farmers will resort to violence which was openly intimated late last night when Secretary of the Interior Work and Reclamation Commissioner Meade were hung in effigy here.

The disagreement between the valley farmers and Reclamation officials, operators of the North Platte Valley irrigation project which is virtually the sole source of moisture for the valley crops, came over payment of past and present operating and maintenance costs of the project.

Dispute Over Debts.

Reclamation Commissioner Meade holds that all past dues must be paid or payment secured by proper notes while the farmers claim all payments should be deferred until the reclassification feature of the recent omnibus water bill, providing for downward readjustment of about $23,000,000 on construction and other charges levied against 15 western projects.

The farmers claim Dr. Work agreed to delay calling of payments until this readjustment is made but later changed his mind.

Dr. Work denies this, claiming that all the government desires is some security. Thus the damned up waters are stagnant and the growing crops are without water.

Developments today consisted largely in telegrams of protest from Nebraska leaders to President Coolidge and Secretary Work and Commissioner Meade. Governor McMullen wired that something must be done immediately to save the crops after he had been advised by Frank Thomas, president of the cooperative better growers association here that "frosting is running high here and there is danger of violence."

Washington Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, May 28. (AP)—Confidence was expressed at the White House today that the turbulent situation in the North Platte irrigation district involving use of water would be adjusted to give the government an opportunity to furnish water to settlers and provide a way of making payments. The question was considered by President Coolidge, Secretary Work and Commissioner Meade of the reclamation service, whom he sent for after Senator Howell, and Representative Simmons, Republicans of Nebraska had communicated with him.

Representative Simmons said he had suggested to the president that the government turn on the water immediately in the North Platte project with the understanding that the questions at issue, would be arbitrated within the next 30 days.

Representative Simmons told the president that the farmers on the project were in no mood to negotiate further unless everyone were saved by immediate irrigation.

SHIPPERS TESTIMONY ON RATES COMPLETED

WASHINGTON, May 28. (AP)—Representatives of the growers and shippers interests completed the presentation of their case before the Interstate Commerce Commission today as the ninth day of oral arguments on proposed increases in western freight rates came to a close.

H. A. Scandrett, vice-president of the Union Pacific railroad and close for the railroads tomorrow, presented the case of the shippers. In their arguments today, more than a dozen commodities added their protests to the long list of those who have attacked the railroads' proposal to establish a horizontal increase in transportation charges.

S. H. Cowan, counsel for the American National Livestock Association, filed a statement with the commission attacking the contention of the railroads that the Hooch-Smith resolution did not include animal products in the agriculture inquiry scope.

"The statements at the argument," he said, "are surprising and manifestly in afterthought and wholly erroneous."

Others who made opposing arguments today included: W. E. Rosenblum, beverage, coal, lime and sulphur interests; August G. Guthrie, operators of Lake Michigan coal docks; R. W. Ropley, Illinois coal traffic bureau and P. Haynes, Chicago Association of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, May 28. (AP)—The crown prince and princess of Sweden were kept on the move throughout the first full day of their visit to the capital by a continuous round of activities which gave them an insight into social, political and scientific phases of American life.

After breakfast at the Swedish legation, they went to the National Museum, then to the capitol to watch congress function. They were luncheon guests at the British embassy, visited the bureau of standards during the afternoon and late in the day attended a reception given in their honor by John Hayes Hammond. Tonight they were guests at a white house dinner.

Today's schedule left the prince and his consort tired but enthusiastically awaiting tomorrow's events which will culminate in the unveiling of a memorial to John Ericsson, designer of the Monitor of Civil War fame. It was chiefly to attend this ceremony, at which President Coolidge will deliver an address that they came to the United States.

Interested in Curious.

At the National Museum the royal couple bent studiously over glass cases filled with curious ranging from American, Mexican and European antiquities. Sandstone and metal objects from prehistoric reptiles, mastodons and numerous paleontological specimens.

"What a pity," the prince said, "his escorts finally persuaded him to leave the museum. He was reluctant to go without seeing more of its wonders, which were of particular interest to him because of his own archaeological researches."

Visits With Scientist.

While viewing the exhibits at the museum, the prince recalled that once on a scientific expedition in Europe he had met Dr. William Henry Holmes, an anthropologist and director of the National Gallery of Art. He insisted that he be taken to the doctor's office and there he conversed with him eagerly for a while. Soon the two had their faces buried in books, one an anthropology work on Maya architecture, the other a treatise on archaeological studies among ancient Mexican cities.

At the capitol, the prince and his party were met by Vice-President Dawes in his senate office and by Chairman Borah of the senate foreign relations committee. Senators Swanson, of Virginia and Edge of New Jersey, members of the committee and by Chairman Potter of the house foreign affairs committee.

The opening of the senate session was observed from the diplomatic gallery but the visitors departed before any business was transacted on the floor.

LONDON, May 28. (AP)—Twelve hundred persons have been killed by a cyclone and tidal wave in Burma says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Rangoon, Burma.

The cyclone struck last Wednesday evening about half past eight o'clock. A huge tidal wave ascended the Naaf river, flooding the country and sweeping away villages to beyond Maungdaw fifty miles.

The cyclone swept the Arakan coast, doing much damage. All the cattle in the devastated area were killed.

The death toll, the dispatch adds, is as yet incomplete. Nearly all the wires are down and there is great delay in communication.

Relief sent into the stricken district up to the present time is inadequate.

Economic Unity

Those who attended the meeting in Geneva to the World Economic conference have revealed a worthy aim, that of economic unity of the world. The conference is held under the auspices of the League of Nations and is one of the many important functions of that body which are recognized as quite beneficial by all countries.

The economists who are working on the unity plan recognize that the fundamental cause for all wars is economic. It was a tax on wheat which began the American Revolution, oppression of the French class which resulted in the French Revolution, and these economists reason that if the world could be brought into economic unity and made into one great human plan for the production of goods, wars would be impossible.

GRADUATION

This is the season when thousands of young people are finishing their school education and entering into that larger and perhaps harder school, the University of Experience. They will find that the world is something of a blinder and inclined to put them thru a rather thorough initiation into the mysteries of everyday living; but if they persevere, they will also find that the world can be shown. It can be convinced of merit, and is ready to reward merit, and the reward may come slowly.

Unless the graduate wishes to continue his education in some institution of higher learning, he should get to work at once. The world has little use for a loafer, and less use for a young loafer. Education unused will not make a living for anybody and young people will soon find that medals and grades will not provide a pay envelope after they finish school.

Hard work and honest work opens the gate to success; there must be a man behind every diploma, or it won't count. Maybe it will take something for the youth to find the niche into which he fits in the world outside the schoolroom, but he should diligently search for it, and not idly wait for it to look him up and fit itself around him. Better still, he should bring his years in school have learned the career he desires to follow, and upon graduation should be ready to pursue it to the finish. There may be struggles along the way and maybe a detour or two here and there, but nothing should divert the youth from the main purpose of his life, when he has once found it.

THE MISSING EVANGELIST

The disappearance at Ocean Park beach near Los Angeles of Mrs. Althea Temple McPherson on the afternoon of May 18 is still attracting attention. Accounts of the tragedy given in Los Angeles papers of May 19 would lead to the belief that the famous evangelist of Angelus Temple had died in the surf. Her secretary who had accompanied her to the beach, was busy reading a Bible on the sand while Mrs. McPherson was in the water. She watched the surf from time to time, but after an unusually long period of preoccupation with her reading, she looked up and saw no trace of the evangelist. The secretary searched Ocean Park beach and Venice for about an hour, then notified the police. Soon news of the tragedy had spread among the 25,000 followers of the young woman preacher and the beach was crowded with praying searching members of her church.

All that night the lights of hundreds of cars parked on the beach glared across the waves, and the rays from two powerful searchlights, used in the movie studios, aided the searchers. Police and boy scouts patrolled the beach, and men dragged the surf out beyond the breakers for the body. During the afternoon an airplane flew above the sea adding in the search.

But recent news dispatches from the west would indicate that the evangelist may still be alive. No trace of the body has been found, the mute evidence of her death was offered in the finding of her cloak on the beach. However, officers found her bathing suit in her car parked near where she is said to have entered the surf. Flailing of the body would clear up the mystery, but otherwise there will always be some doubt as to whether Mrs. McPherson really was drowned, or whether foul play of some sort contributed to her disappearance.

THE SILENT GANGSTERS

The stubborn silence of Klondyke and Myles O'Donnell in the gangland quiz of the Cook county grand jury in regard to the McSwiggin murder is something with which a court does not often have to deal. That silence which jealously guards the secrets of the Chicago gangs is something new in American life. When there exists in this country a code of honor stronger than the law and mightier than the police powers of the government, there is time for some grave considerations.

There are of course ways of eliciting the information desired by the grand jury, if threats of prison sentences do not avail; but these ways are resorted to only in extreme cases, and while they are tacitly admitted to exist, they have no legal status. The third degree is about the only weapon that will combat this gang silence.

Both the O'Donnells are in their early twenties, young men, far too young to have attained such self control and hardness as they show. Their bearing indicates that they have had a vicious training in the schools of gangland, and that they have learned their lessons well. The best efforts of enlightened men and women should be employed to find substitute for gangland, to create an environment in cities that is wholesome and which will lead youth into ways of usefulness and honor, rather than along such vicious and precipitous paths as the O'Donnell brothers seem to have followed.

TRIBAL UNREST

Altho the French and Spanish have just finished a war against African tribesmen, the French troops may not have much rest, and the tribes of Syria are causing considerable trouble. The question in the mind of the average reader is, "Why all this tribal unrest?"

It should be remembered that the war gave European countries new colonies and mandates, in which they have also obtained some rather rich concessions, as have the British in Mosul. It may be that the tribesmen, like some other more enlightened peoples, are jealous of their natural resources, and it may be also that inexperienced colonial officials have been guilty of misgovernment, as is charged against the French in Syria.

A further reason for the disturbances may lie in the fact that during the world war, the Allies forced colonial troops. Tribesmen whose main desire is to fight, were permitted to range themselves on one side or the other in the great conflict. Restrictions on their warfare formerly imposed by the great powers were removed, and they enjoyed once more the privilege of venting their fierce oriental passions and fanaticisms. Then the war came to an end, but the Beduin's and Moor's love of it did not die. The tribesmen found themselves in a land of changed boundaries, new racial and political alignments, and on every hand plenty of excuses for using the sword. They had learned much about modern warfare, and they were eager to use their knowledge. Their order has by no means died, and the international unrest among their more

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Author of "You Can," "Take It," "Up."

ENEMIES

Many a great man has liked to be known by the enemies he has made. In fact some one has said that the truest history or biography of a man may be found in the lives of his enemies.

But I often think that a man is best known by the enemies that he harbors within himself. The strong man is he who has the largest number of able allies within his own make-up.

It was William James who once wrote that "The great thing, then, in all education, is to make our nervous system our ally instead of our enemy."

We all know people who let their nervous systems dictate their entire lives. And there are those who surrender to a liver, or a stomach, or an imagined pain of some sort or other.

My father used to take me into the country with him as he called upon his parishioners. I remember an old lady, who when asked how she was, always had the habit of saying: "Oh, I am quite miserable, Pastor—quite miserable, thank you."

And I now recall, after all these years, that lady certainly looked the part. What a trained crew of enemies she carried around with her. I'll wager that they still dance above her grave.

God put a billion friends here to keep us company when He placed us in our cradles. And we ought to keep a goodly portion of them through life.

It's a hard world at the best, and we need friends and not enemies. Enemies like attention. The minute they are neglected they hunt up new soil and new camping ground. Neglect kills them.

Keep honest tab upon your good feelings, your finest impulses, and remember that one friend outweighs a billion enemies.

A GARDEN INVITATION-1026

(With abject apologies to Tonyson).
Come into the garden, friends,
For the black imp, Frost, has flown;
Come into the garden friends,
(But you need not come alone.)
For it's wearing a lovely, gala gown;
Come see what fair May has done.

Come in where the poppies tall lift high their fiery heads;
Come in where the iris sweet fragrance around it sheds;
Where many old-fashioned flowers smile from their motley beds.
Come into the garden, friends,
And make our joy complete;
For May has been wandering through,
And everywhere her feet have pressed, within its bowers,
Has sprung up a blossom sweet—
—Anne Wakely Jackson.

Greenhouse open evenings until dark beginning Monday for the rest of the week.

FIVE GIRLS LOSE LIVES IN ROCKFORD FIRE

(Continued From Page 1) One, two, three, then a pause. Two more. Then another, finally eight were accounted for. There were thirteen girls and a fore-lady on that floor, the report said.

A fireman from a ladder at a rear window showed down.

There's two here on the floor. They're dead.

Five minutes later firemen had seen the forms of five girls huddled together. Their clothes were burned away. Their flesh was literally cooked by the intense heat of the burning celluloid.

The explosion was caused by a spark that flew out of a hand saw setting fire to a stock of celluloid, was the opinion of fire department officials after questioning employees of the company.

A third positive identification was made at 5 o'clock when Lillie, identified one of the bodies as that of his wife, Mary, mother of eight children.

NOTICE All union Barber Shops will be closed all day Monday, May 31.

whose dismissal was recommended by the Will county grand jury. Captains M. J. Kelly and M. E. Hammermeister and Superintendent William Richard of the honor farm, other employees whose ousting the grand jury urged, had not resigned, and Green said he had not yet got to their cases.

Mrs. C. Elinor Ruell, whom the grand jury recommended be dismissed as superintendent of the women's prison, could not be located and her aides refused to say whether she was still in charge at that institution. The coroner's jury heard the first public relation of the escape plot which led to Deputy Klein's death.

Leopold Will Not Talk

It's "star witness" Nathan Leopold, serving a life sentence for the Frank's murder, declined to testify, attributing his refusal to fear that he would arouse the enmity of his fellow prisoners.

But more than half a dozen witnesses related how the seven convicts, including Klein's permission for an interview, came to his office, stabbed him to death, called Guard Captain Kealey and ordered him to go with them across the yard to get the gate lifted for them, and compelled him to ride with them in the deputy warden's car to freedom.

Kelley said he feared to resist their orders because they said they would kill him if he demurred, and because they named other guard captives who they said would be called in order and either slain or made to take them to freedom.

Whitman Not to Fight

Chicago, May 28. (AP)—John L. Whitman, dismissed by Governor Small as warden of the state prison at Joliet, as a consequence of a grand jury investigation into prison conditions, has no thought of trying to keep his position either by legal or other action.

This he announced tonight after a conference with Clarence S. Barrow, Chicago attorney and his lifelong friend.

He will fight to the limit, however, he said, to resist the abandonment of the state prison of the present system which he installed, and to preserve the civil service rights of six employees whose discharge was recommended by the Will county grand jury.

Say Four Innocent

Four of the six, said, had nothing to do with the escape, or at least not in the way of discipline. The other two—Guard Captains Kelly and Hammermeister—may have been at fault in the escape, but are not subject to dismissal without a civil service hearing, he maintained.

He might have suspended them himself upon investigation he said, but he remained, but he surely would have heard the charges against them in a legal manner before acting definitely upon them. Kelly and Hammermeister are not yet discharged, and have not resigned.

The former warden, veteran of 25 years of criminological work, has no notion, he says, what he will do, now that he has been dismissed as warden.

LYNCH LEADS HOWARD FOR TYPE PRESIDENT

Indianapolis, Ind., May 28. (AP)—With returns from fewer than half of the 79 local unions of the International Typographical Union tabulated in the organization's biennial election, James M. Lynch, president, had a substantial lead over Charles P. Howard of Chicago for the presidency.

The vote from 361 locals gave Lynch a majority of 1,200 votes. Officials declined to make public the total vote at each candidate pending completion of the count tomorrow or Tuesday.

THE BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO SPIRITUALS. By James Weldon Johnson, J. Rosamond Johnson and Lawrence Brown. Viking Press.

Reviewed by ANNE WAKELY JACKSON

No serious student of musical history can afford to remain unacquainted with The Book of American Negro Spirituals. It is as important to musicians as to students of folk-lore. If you have been wont to listen to the singing of Negro Spirituals with amusement only, missing their deep seriousness of purpose, mistaking their occasional naïveté of expression for intended humor, you will find this book a revelation.

In his long and ably written preface, Mr. James Weldon Johnson tells the reader that these songs came into being, what they meant in the lives of their creators, how they embody the poetic feeling and musical passion of the African descendants of various African tribes; how these people whose bodies were held in human bondage sent their spirits soaring in hope and aspiration to the very gates of heaven, pouring out their longing in songs of haunting rhythm and great beauty.

Mr. Johnson points out that, whereas the European concept of music is melody, to the African Negro music is rhythm; and his reaction to it is not mere enjoyment, but exaltation, excitement, ecstasy. In the slave days it afforded the one sure avenue of escape for his spirit. In regard to the importance of rhythm in Negro music, Mr. Johnson says:

"In all authentic American Negro music the rhythms may be divided roughly into two classes—rhythms based on the swinging of the head and body and rhythms based on the patting of hands and feet. Again, speaking roughly, the rhythms of the Spirituals fall in the first class, and the rhythms of secular music in the second class. The 'swinging' of the Spirituals is an altogether subtle and elusive thing. It is ecstasy that manifests itself in the swaying bodies of a whole congregation, swaying as if responding to the baton of some extremely sensitive conductor. So it is very difficult, if not impossible, to sing these songs sitting or standing coldly still, and at the same time capture the spontaneous 'swing' which is of their very essence."

It is the opinion of Carl Van Vechten that white singers cannot do justice to Negro Spirituals, and that women, with very few exceptions, should not attempt to sing them. Mr. Johnson, however, thinks that white singers can sing them—if they feel them. But, as he very justly says, "to feel them is necessary to know the truth about their origin and history, to get in touch with the association of ideas that surround them, and to realize something of what they have meant in the experiences of the people who created them. In a word, the capacity to feel these songs while singing them is more important than any amount of mere artistic technique." Even with "the capacity to feel" the songs, the white singer with as highly developed a sense of rhythm as the Negro possesses would be exceptional.

The collection of Spirituals in this volume, arranged by Mr. J. Rosamond Johnson and Mr. Lawrence Brown, is not intended to be definitive, but rather "representative of this whole field of music, to give examples of every variety of Spiritual." Enough material was retained to fill one or more additional volumes, in arranging the songs the best traditions of both melody and form have been followed. An old-time Negro could sing any of them—their primitive "swing" has been retained.

One would like to dwell at length upon particular songs of deep pathos, aspiration, hope, longing—but space will not permit. The very titles of many of them are poetry in themselves. Suffice it to say that this volume will richly reward careful study, and a mine of musical and technical wealth will be found therein.

However little we may awake to the importance of the work now being done in literature and the arts by American Negroes, intelligent people can scarcely fail to recognize the fact that to this race we owe the creation of an authentic American folk music. Furthermore, that this noble body of folk music is the outcome of the impact of the Christian religion upon an oppressed and intensely musical people. How many oppressed races have forged their chains into a noble heritage of song for posterity?

The above is the decoration by Edward A. Wilson of The Magnificent Idler, a biography of Walt Whitman issued last month by Doubleday, Page & Co. It is supposed to illustrate the act of throwing his first manuscript of "Leaves of Grass" into the sea. The book is, above all, a chronicle of Walt, the lovable, generous and lazy human being. It does not seek to add new facts to the world's knowledge of this eccentric genius, but to recreate the man himself in the mind of the reader.

SAY AND HEARSAY

If you can specify any particular fault in any of the older prose writers, you will find the same fault in the writers of today, and overdone to the extent that none of the older writers would have dared if they dared to do it. So hard put for originality are we, that we take even a fault and exploit it as if it were a virtue, in defiance of what was used to be known as good taste or moderation.

The use of asterisks, for instance, in "The Woman Tempted" there are no less than fifteen rows of asterisks through the book, which is to say, there are as many deliberate omissions. In addition, there are numerous places where a row of spaced periods at the end of a sentence imply (1) that something unprintable was said, or (2) that the context implies what else was said, or (3) that words failed the author.

All this is presumed to be smart style nowadays, but in reality it is a mark of cheapness, or of the writer's carelessness and indifference to the reader's desires. The reader has a right to know what occurred in these intermissions, or the story should not have led up to them.

It is no use either to cite the hiatus between each two acts of a drama, as a criterion. The time of a play is sadly limited, and the patience of an audience no less. But in the case of a novel, there is no necessity for so much economy, and the reader can be favored with very little extra expense in the way of labor and material.

In a play, it is true, that what takes place off stage may be intrinsically of more importance than what is shown "in the frame." However, the technique of a play inhibits realism to a certain extent along with frequent changes of scene and action, while the possibilities of a novel in this respect are almost unlimited. But doubt anything left "up in the air" would be the death of a play.

The use of asterisks nowadays is almost equivalent to saying "Such and such," or "The following," and much as the author would like to accommodate the gentle reader, he (or she) dare go no farther, and run the risk of invoking consternation or the hundred-fold arguments of propriety that not Meneckes's goat, the Watch-and-Ward Society.

Going back a ways to the classics of naughtiness, which have lately been outdone in flavor the never equalled in style—Boccaccio, Margaret of Navarre, Rabelais, Balzac, Chaucer—we find asterisks in their stories, because they left nothing to the imagination. Doubt, I should have said, of their readers. That part of the story was as much as any other part—or more, in point of fact, or there would have been no object in beginning the story at all.

My first acquaintance with asterisks came when as a boy I was reading Bulwer-Lytton. I do not recall seeing them in Scott, or Dickens (what I read of him), or Cooper, or Mayne Reid. They may have been there, but if so, their effect on me was not so enduring, and I will not take the time to verify the matter, or the information may except the limits of this space.

But Bulwer—there is where I felt the effect of the sign, and in a way feel it yet, when I recall the plots of his stories, the I very much doubt if now I could read one of the novels with patience till I arrived at that jumping-off place in the narrative.

Beloved Vagabonds

THE BOOK OF THE ROGUE. Edited by Joseph Lewis French. Boni & Liveright. New York. 1926. $3.00.

Reviewed by JOHN KEARNS

It is not considered respectable to admire and "heroize" common law-breakers until after the second or third generation. We have it in us to admire some of our most intimate friends who break the laws and get away with it, and sometimes we may even feel that it is a little cowardly in ourselves to pay so much respect to the laws of the land, the minor ones especially.

But the criminal in the next county or the next state, if he happens to get caught, is seldom fortunate in winning our esteem—not until his name has become a by-word, or he has passed on leaving the record of his career enshrouded in legends.

As a certain translator of Balzac observes—"It was long ago noticed—indeed, sober eyes both in France and elsewhere noticed it at the time—that the criminal, more or less virtuous, more or less terrible, more or less superhuman, exercised a kind of sorcery over minds in France from the greatest to the least at this particular time, and even later. Not merely Balzac, but Victor Hugo and Georges Sand, succumbed to his fascinations; and after these authors it is quite unnecessary to mention any others."

Civilized existence little affords the prolonged periods of adventure and excitement which we all crave, as a sort of instinct derived from our ancestors of the prehistoric ages. Athletics and games provide only a meager outlet for the liberation of this energy. And most of us in this country are not so far removed from the frontier days which liberally provide the means of gratifying this instinct.

Criminals, first, sport second, slapstick humor third—that is a good news recipe. At least we can read about the people's doing what we cannot or dare not do ourselves.

In his foreword the author says of the criminal: "He is really one of the choicest figures of literature, eagerly sought after by the small boy who devours him in secret, and regarded by the adult as a villain. I am pointing these remarks especially at the great criminal of whom I herewith present the reader with a choice collection, all of whom have achieved immortality although two of them live only in the pages of fiction."

The two in question are the ones in "The Memoirs of Barry Lyndon," by Thackeray, a character said to be founded on the celebrated Casanova, and "Vautrin the Terrible," an account somewhat condensed from Balzac's novel "Père Goriot." The rest of the rogues happen to be the real thing, who have been fortunate enough to find literary biographers—The Borgias in Alexandre Dumas, Count Camille Desmoulins in Thomas Carlyle, Griffiths Walworth in Oscar Wilde, Francois Villon in R. L. Stevenson.

Others just as interesting too—fifteen in all, and one woman, Mary Young, alias Jenny Diver, the "queen of sharpers" and one from the United States, J. A. Slade, or "Captain" Slade, the border ruffian and terror "feared" a great deal more generally than the Almighty, from Kearney, west, and a Vigilante at that, as he openly boasted.

The account of Mary Young is taken from that famous old chronicle of crime, "The Newgate Calendar," originally published in a number of volumes, and is today a rare and expensive work, but abounds in thrilling trials, memoirs of notorious characters, speeches, confessions, and last words of executed criminals. It is the classic work of crime, of which most everyone has heard, but few nowadays have had the privilege of seeing or reading a copy.

RECENT BOOKS TO BE REVIEWED SHORTLY

From a well-to-do merchant—whether he or she no one yet knows—comes a collection of sonnets in the old style and free verse in the new style, under the title of "Episodes and Epistles," (Selzer) by W. L., and according to one critic they display "a sure, delightful rhythm, a thought, a feeling, and a phase of feeling to which one cannot be indifferent."

In the second annual issue of "The Best Love Stories" (of 1925, Small, Maynard) there is to be found some deviation from the popular conception of the love story, for the author has based her compilation on human affections, not on sentimental love. Yet the stories run the gamut of emotions from flaming passion to a more quietly tender spirit.

"Notorious Literary Attacks" (Boni & Liveright) by Albert Mondell is a collection of critical considerations of important literary persons or movements which have never been assembled before and to which access has been extremely difficult. Each article is devastating in its attack, brilliant in style, and important for its source or its effect upon literary history.

MADDEN CRITICISED FOR STAND ON RELIEF

CHICAGO, May 28. (AP)—William Hirth, editor of a Missouri farm paper and chairman of the corn belt committee representing 24 agriculture organizations in a statement here today adversely criticised Congressman Martin B. Madden of Illinois for favoring a farm relief bill not involving a subsidy or an advance from the federal treasury instead of the Haugen bill which was defeated in the house.

Farm organizations however, he said, have never asked a subsidy, this growing out of an amendment to the Haugen federal farm board bill which was not a demand of farmer representatives. Discussing the proposed treasury revolving fund to make the organization for "practicable," he added:

"Farmers would pay every penny of it back. At the close of the world war, the United States grain corporation made an outright gift to the treasury of approximately $70,000,000, every penny of which belongs to the farmers."

All the farmers ask, he said is that they be supplied with a legislative device that will enable them to collect the tariff in the home markets. Both major parties were pledged to such legislation, he added, and said the farmers will demand an accounting in the coming congressional elections.

KRIM MAKES FORMAL SURRENDER AT TAZA

FEZ, French Morocco, May 28 (AP)—Abd-El-Krim, the despoiled Rifian chieftain, who on Wednesday announced his submission, made formal surrender today at Taza, to Representatives of General Boichut, French commander-in-chief in Morocco.

The ceremony which took place at Camp Girard, as described in a message from Taza, was not the imposing affair that might have been expected. Since because of the express request of the Spanish government Krim was treated like any other tribal chieftain laying down his arms.

General Boichut personally was unable to receive the surrender of Krim, a fall from his horse having compelled him to remain at quarters.

The French say that Krim's brother, Si Mohammed, and his uncle are expected to come with the French lines soon.

While lines are being drawn up for this fight the upron over President Coolidge's executive order authorizing the employment of state and local officers as federal enforcement agents continues. The order was defended today in the senate by Senator Blaine, Democrat, South Carolina, who declared that the federal prohibition agents there were in the state the better for law enforcement.

M'PHERSON MYSTERY IS STILL UNSOLVED

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 28. (AP)—The end of the tenth day since the disappearance at the beach of Albee Sample McPherson, evangelist and self-proclaimed healer of Angelus Temple, still found no sign of a body cast upon the shore to support her followers' theory of drowning and no definite action by police, sheriff or district attorney's office to set at rest the myriad of rumors connected with the mystery.

Today Captain A. B. Lorain of Venice made an affidavit for the police that he was present at the beach at the point and time Mrs. McPherson disappeared and that no person, man or woman, was swimming there.

This is a flat contradiction of the statement of Miss Emma Schaefer, the evangelist's secretary, who accompanied her employer to the beach and who made a belated report to the police of the disappearance.

Kenneth C. Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple and friend of Mrs. McPherson, who was questioned by police yesterday and who threw no light on the mystery, today left Los Angeles. It was presumed he had returned to San Francisco where his parents live.

Delicious Combination Easy to Make
Mixed Pineapple and Strawberry Jam

If you want to add a delightful "surprise" to your store of jams and jellies this year—a really delicious treat—make some mixed strawberry and pineapple jam by this simple, easy recipe.

No finer blend of flavors can be imagined than that of the delicately luscious strawberry with the refreshing tartness of ripe, juicy pineapple. Many women like this recipe, too, for its economy since the pineapple makes your strawberries go so much further.

Crush to a fine pulp about 1 quart of ripe berries. Put pineapple through food chopper, chop very fine. (Canned crushed pineapple may be used). Measure 2 level cups of each fruit into large kettle. Add 7 level cups (3 lbs.) sugar and mix well. Use hottest fire and stir constantly before and while boiling. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in 1 cup of Certo. Skim pour quickly and cover hot jam at once with hot melted paraffin.

With such delicately flavored fruits as pineapple and strawberries the advantages of the Certo method are especially noticeable. For not only are these difficult fruits left perfectly every time, but the short-boil, possibly only with Certo, prevents the loss of fresh flavor and color which occurs during long boiling.

A book of simple, tested recipes comes with each bottle of Certo. Your grocer carries Certo, or you can send 10c (for postage) and get a trial, half-size bottle which will make from 6 to 10 glasses of jam or jelly, depending upon the recipe used. Address Douglas-Pectin Corporation, 2399 Granite Building, Rochester, New York.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

The Farm Bureau committee in charge of the Baby Beef project spent this last Wednesday and Thursday visiting 40 some boys and girls who are feeding Baby Bees.

On Thursday 20 of the boys went on the trip to see how they were handling the calves and how they compared to their own at the present time.

Morgan County Fair is assured of an exceptionally high quality Baby Beef show this fall. The calves as a whole are getting the best of attention and are in fine condition. With another 90 days to go on a finish there should be several of these calves good enough to go to the state show at Springfield and then on to the international at Chicago. There are some 22 Angus calves, 16 Shorthorns and eight Herefords on feed. The different breeds will show in their own classes and then the winners from these classes will compete for championship. No one would dare risk picking the winner at the present time for the calves as a whole are of such high quality that the feeding of the next 90 days will make many changes. The judge this year will have a hard job placing the winning calf in all the breeds.

I. C. JUNIORS WIN
BASEBALL PENNANT

In a game which was a thrill from start to finish, the Illinois College Juniors won the inter-class baseball championship by sinking the seniors in a 9 to 8 battle royal. The Juniors have defeated each of the classes once for the title.

Both pitchers were hit hard, two home runs and a pair of two baggers being chalked up against the senior spit-baller, and a three base drive and two doubles against the Junior twister.

"Freddie" Johnston was the star of the game, making three one-handed stabs at line drives and pegging them accurately. Danner stopped a rally in the fifth which would have spelled defeat for the Juniors when McGee poled out a long fly to left, with three on, only to have it fall in the hands of Danner, retiring the side.

The Seniors took the lead in the final inning with two runs and the Juniors took one in their half. The Seniors tallied four in the second and the Juniors took 3. Kelly shut the grads out in the next two frames while the Juniors registered three more runs. In the fifth, the Seniors made two runs, giving them a one run lead but after one had scored for the Juniors, Walker overthrew third and let in the winning run.

M'BRIDE IS OFFERED
I. A. C. MEMBERSHIP

"Mickey" McBride, Little 19 pole vault champion who has been developed by Coach W. T. Harmon of Illinois College, has received blanks for application for membership in the Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago. The blanks come as a result of his performance in the last meet when he broke the standing conference pole vault record after he had been forced to change his form in the last three days on account of a stiffened left leg.

When "Mickey" really gets into condition he should clear the bar at better than thirteen feet. He made a try for that height in the state meet held here last weekend, but failed, barely hitting the bar with his hand on his second trial, knocking it off. However, his "charley-horse" has had a good rest now and he should be in condition by the time of the first meet which will be held in Chicago on June 26.

Illini And Michigan
Strong In Prelims

IOWA CITY, Iowa, May 28. (AP)—A hard fight between Illinois and Michigan was forecast as a result of the preliminaries in seven of the 16 events of the Western conference track and field championship meet held here today. Michigan qualified thirteen men for tomorrow's finals and Illinois 12.

Nine of the ten teams, Purdue, excepted, were represented by qualifiers. Purdue is expected to qualify in a few of the events tomorrow.

Phil Northrup of Michigan was the outstanding performer in today's trials. He threw the javelin 205 feet 9 inches for a Big Ten record, shattering his own mark of 201 feet, 9 1-2 inches. The rouge season in Jacksonville is in full swing, and games are being played regularly at the rouge court at the home of I. M. Bunce on Vandalla Road. Players from Concord, Winchester, Bluffs and Rixey as well as Jacksonville are playing on the Bunce court.

Thursday, Chester Gaither and Mr. Bunce of this city defeated Anson Conatas and Bob Coates of Bluffs three games and earlier in the week Mr. Gaither and Rev. C. W. Kowalsky of Bluffs played four games each playing two balls, and dividing honors 2 and 2. A new set of rouge balls which will soon be in use is expected to add to the pleasures of the game.

MANY ROUGE GAMES ON BUNCE COURT

It is expected that there will be three or four tournaments this summer, the first movement is on foot to establish a court at Nichols park. The Bunce court, while in excellent shape last year is in still better condition this year.

NEW YORK, May 28. (AP)—Unlike most pre-holiday sessions, today's stock market gave an impressive demonstration of strength on a heavy turnover. Both the rail and industrial averages closed higher on the day with final quotations disclosing a long list of net gains ranging from one to eight points.

Total sales were 1,596,300 shares the largest since April 23, when the 2,000,000 mark was crossed for the first time.

The weekly mercantile reviews continue to emphasize the unfavorable effects of the unseasonable weather but point out that bank clearings confirm other indications of a sustained large purchasing power.

Predictions that the recent advance in steel bars would be extended to other products infused new strength into the market. U. S. Steel common advanced over two points to 125, a new high on the current recovery and Crucible closed 18 higher at 69 1/2.

Discovery that a rather thin market was in evidence caused a slight reaction. Atchison was again the leader in the railroad group crossing 140 to within 1/4 of the record high for all time, established last year.

Among the dozen or so other rails to show net advances of a point or more were Chicago and North-western and Chicago and East Illinois preferred.

Call money renewed at 3 1/2 percent, advanced to 4 and hence 4 1/2 percent at the top. Banks are reported to have called about $30,000,000 in loans during the day.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged. Demand sterling was slightly higher around $1.86 3/16. Spanish pesetas which sold at their highest price in three years yesterday, fell back about 10 points to 15 1/2 cents on realizing.

CHICAGO CASH GRAIN

Chicago, May 28. (AP)—Cash wheat acted weak all day. Only a few buyers were in the market. Increased track offerings was the feature. The cash trading basis showed a reduction of two to four cents. New York said No. 2 red and No. 2 hard selling at 2c under new May at the finish.

There were no shipping sales reported. Deliveries on May contracts today were 393,000 bushels and so far this month 1,385,000 bushels. Sales today to go to store were 50,000 bushels.

Receipts expected were 175 cars. New York said no fresh export business was done, but Winnipeg announced large export sales.

With the exception of a few choice contract grades the cash corn market was dull and weak. The cash trading basis was 1c easier to 1c better. Shipping sales here were 56,000 bushels. Receipts expected were 175 cars.

215,000 bushels, and so far this month 9,530,000 bushels.

Cash oats were in fair demand and steady most of the session. The cash trading basis was 1c better to 1c easier. Shipping sales here were 76,000 bushels. Receipts were 97 cars. Deliveries were 57,000 bushels and so far this month 4,060,000 bushels.

Hogs—receipts 5,000; steady; with Thursday's best; top $14.25 on 160 pounds; bulk sales $13.60 to $14; packing sows $12 to $12.50; stock pigs steady, $14.25 to $15.25.

Sheep—receipts 5,000; spring lambs 25c higher, top natives $17.25; better grades $16.75 to $17.10; sheep slow and drab; Texas wethers carrying an end of breakers $8.50.

East St. Louis, Ill. May 28. (AP)—U. S. Department of Agriculture—Hogs—11,000. Generally strong to 5c higher, except on packing sows and extreme heavy butchers. Most of these 15c to 25c lower; top $14.40; bulk 190 pounds down $14.25 to $14.30; 200 to 210 pounds $14.10 to $14.20; 240 to 260 pounds $14 to $14.10; 300 to 325 pounds down $13.65 to $13.75; packing sows $12 to $13.25.

CHICAGO BUTTER MARKET
Chicago, May 28. (AP)—Liberal offerings of 92 score butter early in the butter market today resulted in a 1c decline on the medium and top scores.

WHEAT MARKET SHOWS RENEWAL OF STRENGTH

CHICAGO, May 28. (AP)—Surprising renewal of strength developed in the wheat market today. Speculators who were selling freely in expectation of forcing a fresh break in the May price found difficulty getting their wheat back. Today's deliveries on May contracts totaled only 301,000 bushels and nervousness of traders was increased by unfavorable crop reports from parts of Kansas and Nebraska.

Wheat closed strong 1/2c to 3/4c net higher with corn 1/2c off to 1c up, oats unchanged to 1c down, and provisions unchanged to 12c advance. Top figures of the day in the wheat market were reached right at the opening and just at the close the leader in each case being the May delivery.

Considerable significance was attached in some quarters to the fact that June delivery of wheat commanded more than 12c premium today over July and it was currently asserted that cash wheat in June would be scarcer than in May. In this connection it was pointed out that mills have bought as sparingly as possible of late and that the domestic visible supply has dropped to below half the total of a year ago. One anomalous condition existing here today however, was that cash wheat prices failed to follow the sharp new upturn in the May price as a matter of fact toward the end of

NEW PLAN AT LIBERTY FOR STORY HOURS

During Summer Months, Two Story Hours for Children to be Conducted Weekly; First Story Hour to be This Morning.

The Children's department of the Public Library is making several most interesting changes in its plans for the regular Children's Hours. During the summer months, and commencing with the regular Saturday morning story hour at ten o'clock today, the stories are to be told outdoors on the library lawn, and there will be games as well. All during the winter, the children have been enthusiastic patrons of the Saturday morning story hours. Now that summer is here, even more of them will be able to come, and bring their little brothers and sisters, or maybe their playmates, who have not yet learned how interesting the story hours are.

This morning, Miss Kathryn Mier, children's librarian, has planned three games—"Number's Change" and "Flowers and Baskets," and the more familiar one, "London Bridges." Then she will also tell two stories, in honor of Memorial Day, "A Flag Incident," and "Betsey Ross and the Flag."

Then in addition to the Saturday morning story hours, Miss Mier will also conduct another on Wednesday mornings, to be held at ten o'clock on the library lawn.

All the children of the city are invited.

"CANNED HEAT" GETS STRANGERS IN TROUBLE

Police on the night force found a couple of suspicious characters prowling about the business district in the small hours of Friday morning and shadowed them. The trail led to the Wabash tracks near the Swift plant, where the men tried to pry open the door of an empty refrigerator car. Police arrested them, and found that they were acting under the influence of "canned heat," two cans of which the officers took from one of the men. The strangers gave their names as James Carter of Sullivan, Ind., and James Lewis of Cleveland. They were held for the night at the station and later yesterday asked to make themselves scarce.

SPEAKER POINTS OUT AIDS TO CHARACTER

Former Enforcement Commissioner of Chicago Addresses Hugo Crowd at J. H. A. Commencement—Tells of Crime Conditions.

A hundred and thirty-four young people of Jacksonville and community received their diplomas last night as graduates of the local high school, the class of 1926. An audience of almost a thousand people witnessed the commencement exercises. The program was carried out according to schedule. The young people who participated in the musical numbers received hearty applause.

Principal E. S. Finlay introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. John H. Williamson of Chicago, formerly law enforcement commissioner in that city, and a member of the national commission appointed to investigate the comparative crime records of various countries. His theme was "The Making and Breaking of Character," on which he presented some interesting facts. He said in part:

"In my experience as law enforcement commissioner of Chicago, I had abundant opportunity to study character of all types. We have everything up there that was ever known in the world, all nationalities, all races, all colors of skin, every philosophy, and every conception of duty known to man, every idea of government, all of which go into the making of character. I have sat with the mayor in his office and the vice lord in his den. I have talked before the august body of the city council and rubbed shoulders with the greatest crooks. From all this I have learned something of what should go into the making of character, and of what will ultimately break it. And when I speak of the making and breaking of character, I mean also the making and breaking of the nation; for when character goes, the nation is gone also.

America Is Great

"America is great in her tradition, her history, her wealth, her natural resources, her man power and woman power, and we are proud of her greatness in these things; but she is also the greatest in crime, and I wish I did not have to say that. We have at least one murder a day in Chicago, fifty times more than in London, a city with twice our population. In the past twenty years there have been 117,000 homicides in the United States, and 100,000 of those murderers have never been brought to trial and punished for their crime. The report of the crime commission says that the past ten years have been the worst ever experienced in this country on account of crime, and that if any remedy is not found, the next decade will be worse than the last.

"Now there are some things about you that you can't help; you can't help the place where you were born, the name you bear, your hereditary tendencies, or the color of your skin. But there are other things which go into the making of character that you should have. The first is education. There is never a premium on ignorance in a land where such schools as we have are within the reach of all.

"You must also have some religion. A brilliant mind is a menace when it is accompanied by a sordid heart. Eighty-five percent of the crime today is committed by young people, and most of them never had any religious training. Leopold and Loeb could not tell us of any religious training they had ever received, either in the home or in any institution they attended. They were brilliant, but their hearts were sordid.

Change in Home

"Parents, you cannot avoid your obligations to your children; you cannot turn them over to the school for their education, to the church for their religion, and to society for their pleasure, and then go to bed and to sleep, not knowing where they are at night or what they are doing. If you do that, you need not be surprised if those children drift into crime. There is a great change in the American home, and it has lost its old-fashioned respect and has become a sort of comfort station. The old family circle is broken.

"We must also have some old-fashioned Americanism, the kind that is proud of the constitution and the laws and will uphold them. My friend, you cannot have a great character and be a scoundrel; you cannot talk before your children of violating a certain law for which you have no liking and feel sure that they will not follow your example and violate some other law. I am not talking wet and dry now; I am simply asking for the restoration of the oldtime respect for the constitution and laws of the United States.

"We should also have a respect for the flag, and I hope that every member of this class will take a solemn oath to uphold that flag and all for which it stands. Whatever you may think of Mussolini, he has one vision—Italy. Every graduate on this platform should resolve under God to be as zealous for America as is Mussolini for Italy."

MEMORIAL DAY

It has been decided to have Decoration Day ceremonies at Jacksonville cemetery, and also at Diamond Grove and Calvary Sunday morning.

All persons willing to attend are requested to assemble in automobiles in the vicinity of the American Legion Home at 9:30 o'clock. ROTARIANS HEAR BRIEF HISTORY OF TELEGRAPH

Phil A. Heneghan Speaker at Luncheon of Club Friday—Tells of Automatic Printer.

The importance of Jacksonville as a repeating station was told members of the Rotary club at its weekly luncheon yesterday by Phil A. Heneghan, engineer in charge of the Western Union Telegraph company's plant here. Mr. Heneghan gave a brief history of the telegraph business at the building of the first telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore, built in 1844. The first telegraph company was organized in 1851 by Hiram W. Sibley and associated in 1851. It had a capital stock of $350,000. After the organization of this company, several other companies came into existence. In 1854 the Western Union Telegraph company was organized and absorbed some 550 other companies which owned the present time handles about 85 percent of the telegraph business of the country.

Mr. Heneghan explained the working of the automatic printer. This machine transmits and receives messages by attendants who are not familiar with the Morse code. A girl punches a tape which is fed into a transmitting machine. At the receiving end a girl is employed to punch the tape into the machine and the message is automatically worked well under favorable weather conditions, but during electrical storms they develop considerable trouble.

Four men are employed at the local repeating station to keep the repeaters adjusted properly. Mr. Heneghan is in charge of the plant with A. Lytle, Leslie Vieira and Raymond Linn as assistants.

Heneghan predicted that within a very short time he expected to see automatic printers installed in private business houses. He said that such a service would be cheap and that a written record would thus be obtained.

The placing of the repeating station in Jacksonville was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Heneghan. Jacksonville is one of the few smaller cities in the state that has a 24-hour telegraph service.

The guests of the club yesterday were Judge Harry Stuttle of Litchfield, president-elect of the Litchfield Rotary club and Charles Robinson a Rotarian from Springfield. Judge Stuttle extended greetings from the Litchfield club which Jacksonville organized a few months ago.

A. A. U. W. LUNCHEON IS PLEASANT OCCASION

Seniors of I. C. and I. W. C. are Guests—Mrs. Florence Knapp is Speaker, Telling of Experiences in Politics.

The annual May Luncheon of the American Association of University Women was marked by two distinguishing features; first, that its guests were the senior women from Illinois and the Woman's College, and second, that its speaker, and guest of honor was Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp of Syracuse, New York, Dean of the College of Home Economics of Syracuse University, and Secretary of State of New York.

The luncheon was held Friday afternoon at the Pilgrim Memorial dining room which was charmingly decorated in spring flowers.

Luncheon was served at 12:30 o'clock, with Mrs. L. S. Doane, president of the Jacksonville branch of American Association of University Women, presiding. Mrs. Doane introduced Mrs. Knapp, whose address was given on the subject, "Experiences of an Educator in the Field of Politics."

Mrs. Knapp's talk was entirely non-partisan, with an informality and with a humor and personal charm that made her a delightful, as well as an informing speaker.

She opened her address with a brief resume of the establishment of the Syracuse College of Home Economics, whose history provided a background for her political activities. "Early following the war when I was privileged to be associated with Cornell University, came the call from Syracuse University to come there and begin a college of Home Economics," Mrs. Knapp said in her opening remarks.

We have since that time been in the Agriculture building, the Dean wrote me, "because the boys have all gone to war; we have no money. Come, if you will, and establish the College you have always dreamed of, that of a college of Home Economics."

"So journeying around the country and studying the colleges, I found small segregated groups of girls learning a little sewing and a little cooking, and a little art, to contribute in a meagre way to the greatest science in the world—the science of how to build and how to control and how to direct the great American home. Our own college at Syracuse we have established around a strong center of classical education, based on an entirely new curriculum that requires 100 hours of classical work toward a Bachelor of Science degree, for we believe that a fine, strongly developed classical background is absolutely necessary to nourish and keep alive this great new science.

"And so, with faith in God, in women, and in ideals, and with no money, we established the college of Home Economics, which was founded nine years ago, and today has an enrollment of 300 women students, and a graduating class of 55. Although I am not familiar with the ideals of your own colleges, I know that institutions which have survived for the number of years that these colleges have, must have a substantial basis, and fundamentals that are exactly right."

In Politics

"In politics," Mrs. Knapp said, in discussing this phase of her address, "we women find it first necessary to put ourselves in positions that are acceptable to men politicians. I have learned that the women of Illinois are facing the same type of problem in your state, with its Chicago, as we of New York faced with Greater New York. Here in Illinois, you may be asking yourselves the question: 'Where shall we begin, and how shall we proceed?' I shall tell you what our experience had to be in order to deserve some political recognition. We began with a primary interest in education, placing women on the school boards, and as board presidents. Then we made ourselves felt in the smallest political units of our communities. We went through all the dreary work of politics, placing our representatives all along the line. We advanced women from our educational groups, sustaining them through and after the campaign. We want them to feel that there is one unit—that of the A. A. U. W., that is always behind them. We feel that one office in every seven should belong to a woman.

"The call to me to represent the State of New York on the primary ticket as Secretary of State, came just at the time the Home Economics College was beginning to be firmly established. We were sure of our incoming freshmen class; we were sure of positions for our graduates, and we were beginning to get our debts paid. There was a great question in my mind whether or not I wanted to give it up at this time, for the responsibilities and uncertain honors of running on the primary ticket. But because everyone on the ticket was a college man and college woman, it seemed safe to take the chance, then if ever."

It is a matter of record that Mrs. Knapp was successful in her race for Secretary of State, receiving a large majority of votes, and in this capacity she has accomplished two unusual feats, that of taking the census of New York in six weeks time, a task that has ordinarily required six months and more; and that of establishing automatic voting machines in New York City.

In concluding her address, Mrs. Knapp said: "I have learned that women have faith in each other. One woman sustains another, and all petty jealousies are wiped out. It remains with college women to be among the first to accept the responsibility that has come with this new era, to apply their knowledge, and to fully interpret their obligations as full citizens. There can only be one reason why women are not accepting these obligations, and that is that they do not understand its duties, and the danger of neglect of citizenship."

"To the members of the American Association of University Women I say this: the records women have been able to make have been such as to merit their political advancement. If there is no discrimination made relative to sex. The sponsoring of women in politics is one of the new obligations which our Association must accept."

DEAF SCHOOL HAS INTERESTING DISPLAY

Jacksonville residents who are interested in industrial displays of students will do well to visit the School of the Deaf today and view the truly wonderful work being done in various lines by the students of the institution. The main exhibit is on view in the main building just north of the recreation room, while in the cold storage department, a display of sliced meats, beef-quarters, hams, etc., are temptingly displayed.

In the north end of the display hall are grouped the athletic trophies, and a reproduction of Lincoln's Gymnasium, the proposed new gym for the school which is to be built during the present year, and beside it, the football field with a race track encircling the field.

Further along comes the exhibits of tempting bakery goods and other edibles, followed by the display of millinery by the girls of Mrs. Suhy's classes. Mrs. McElroy's dressmaking students, also have a wonderful display of gowns made by them.

The rest of the hall is crowded with exhibitions of photography, art, the finest of cabinet work, and a special table to the cobble display, showing shoes in the different steps of manufacture.

The exhibit will be open to the public without charge all during today, and in addition, the boys will stage their annual track and field meet on the athletic field at 9 o'clock this morning.
